O. LYNN NORRIS

A wildlife artist with a difference, Lynn’s art has depth and dimension, literally. Each piece is done on all natural, kiln dried, bark-framed basswood. By using wood as her canvas, she is able to hand carve the base on which her subject is presented. Once the image has been carved out, she brings it to life with paint. Creating each image around the wood’s own grain and knots.

Q. GAIL WILSON

Gail Wilson offers you a new perspective when looking at stained glass. It doesn’t have to be a grand church window or a tiny sun catcher. She sees glass as an art form. The glass itself is a work even before it is cut, just like the statue of David hidden in the stone. The images of her finished glass works are sometimes already there to be discovered.

R. ANDREA TURNBULL

Thyme of the Season. A folk art studio, store and garden gallery, features the work of woodcarver Andrea Turnbull. Innovative, imaginative, distinctly one-of-a-kind, Turnbull’s mixed-media pieces are inspired by the wildlife of Muskoka and incorporate objects found in the area. Come for a leisurely stroll through our gardens on the shores of the Indian River in Port Carling.
